

Sara Keating
Administrative Services Manager I
LA County Library

Sara Keating is a proud third-generation Los Angeles County employee, which basically makes her County royalty. Her family roots run so deep in public service that her grandmother was part of the team who handed out the very first employee numbers back in the day — so yes, County life is truly a Keating family tradition.

Over her 18 years with the County, Sara has worked with some of its most impactful departments — Children and Family Services, Mental Health’s Public Guardian, and the small, but mighty, Regional Park and Open Space District — before landing happily in the Administration Division at LA County Library, where she now helps keep the magic running behind the scenes.

When she’s not working, Sara is soaking up every moment with her family. She’s the proud mom of her very own real-life superhero: her 10-year-old son, who proves daily that not all heroes wear capes — some rock glucose monitors and insulin pumps like absolute champions. Her son is wildly talented, endlessly inspiring, and very likely to become the world-famous artist Sara once dreamed of being herself.

A self-proclaimed “crafty but not creative” maker, Sara can usually be found with an iPad in her lap, a fresh set of brush pens nearby, or a rainbow of watercolor and acrylic paints waiting for their moment. Weekends often disappear into designing cheeky shirts for friends and family — and when she’s not making them, she’s wearing them while cheering on her beloved Anaheim Ducks. Sports are basically a second language in her household, where the Ducks, Notre Dame Fightin’ Irish, and LA Rams keep the energy high and the weekends loud.

Sara also loves gathering with friends and family for board games, escape rooms, and whatever the newest puzzle obsession happens to be. If there’s teamwork, laughter, or a little friendly competition involved, Sara is all in. When she’s not yelling at a TV, solving a puzzle, or shouting “Bingo!”, she’s packing for the next family adventure. She loves exploring new destinations, but nothing beats the bliss of a week-long cruise where the biggest decision is “pool deck or trivia.” Her favorite season? Fireplace season — that magical time of year when the house is clean, the fire is crackling, and her kitty Kabbie curls up beside her like the cozy little queen she is.
