

2020 Doody's Core Titles Information Now Available from Rittenhouse

April 27, 2020—The 2020 Edition of Doody's Core Titles® (DCT) has been released, and Rittenhouse Book Distributors, Inc. is pleased to announce that this essential resource is now integrated across Rittenhouse.com and R2Library.com. The DCT health sciences list and collection development tools from Rittenhouse are available now available for free to Rittenhouse partners.

DCT is released annually by Doody Enterprises, Inc. with the support and the expertise of almost 200 medial librarians and content experts. DCT recognizes excellence in clinical and educational books across more than 121 health sciences subject areas. Rittenhouse makes this list and its data available to academic library and hospital partners on both Rittenhouse.com and R2Library.com, in addition to using this DCT data to create unique collection development tools such as the Doody's Core Titles Update.

“The Doody's Core Titles Update tool on Rittenhouse.com enables academic library and hospital partners streamline their collection management workflow. They have the ability to instantly review which print titles on the current Doody's Core Titles® list they have not yet purchased.” said Nicole Gallo, Executive Director of Sales & Marketing at Rittenhouse. “We value our partners, and offering this free tool is one way we can assist with collection management.”

In addition to DCT tools available on Rittenhouse.com for print products, Rittenhouse also offers a list of DCT titles that are available for purchase on its eBook database, the R2 Digital Library. With 573 DCT eBook titles available, the R2 Digital Library consists one of the most extensive selections available for institutional acquisition for digital collections.

“To support our partners in their digital health sciences acquisitions, the R2 Digital Library offers special collections of Doody's Core Titles® and Doody's Core Titles Essential Purchases” said Meg White, Executive Director Technology Services at Rittenhouse. “These lists are tools to streamline collection development decisions, so our academic library and hospital partners can ensure the most trusted health sciences eBooks are available to their patrons.”

Health sciences librarians rely on DCT as a key collection development tool. Rittenhouse is committed to providing academic and hospital partners a combination of DCT and online tools to provide valuable support for their collection development needs.

Please visit Rittenhouse.com or R2Library.com to access the new 2020 Doody's Core Titles® list, and utilize Rittenhouse's collection development tools.
