

New board. New member. New Rittenhouse.

Rittenhouse announces new Advisory Board as well as a new Board Member who will help reshape the future of the health sciences content distributor.

Rittenhouse announced the creation of an Advisory Board to help remold the health sciences and medical content distributor to better meet the needs of its customers. To provide insight from different industries, The Rittenhouse Advisory Board will be comprised of leaders in the fields of medicine, higher education, publishing and retail. The Advisory Board will meet quarterly to review current processes, products and services.

Today, Rittenhouse has also announced the appointment of tenured librarian Shannon Glover to their Advisory Board. Shannon has over 20 years of experience, with a diverse background in academic, medical and public libraries. Shannon joins Rittenhouse at an exciting time as the company is currently rethinking and redefining the delivery of health sciences and medical content.

"We are thrilled Shannon is joining our Advisory Board. As an expert in medical libraries, she brings incredibly valuable insights to our team as we continue to remold Rittenhouse in the eyes of our customers."
-Kevin Ream, Chairman of the Board, Rittenhouse
