

2019 Doody's Core Titles Information Now Available from Rittenhouse

April 29, 2019—Rittenhouse Book Distributors, Inc. is pleased to announce that the 2019 Edition of Doody's Core Titles (DCT) is now integrated across Rittenhouse.com and R2Library.com. The essential collection development data is available now available for free to Rittenhouse Partners.

Representing the expertise of more than 200 librarians and content experts, DCT is released annually, ahead of the MLA Annual Meeting. Rittenhouse makes the data available to Partners on both Rittenhouse.com and R2Library.com, in addition to using this DCT data to create unique services such as the Doody's Core Title Update.

"Rittenhouse's Customized Doody's Core Title Update tool on Rittenhouse.com enables Library and Hospital Partners to instantly review which print titles on the current Doody's Core Title list they have not yet purchased." said Nicole Gallo, Executive Director of Sales & Marketing at Rittenhouse. "We value our Partners, and offering this free tool is one way we can assist with the collection management and development process."

With 549 DCT titles available for institutional purchase on the R2 Digital Library, Rittenhouse offers one of the most extensive selections available for institutional acquisition for digital collections.

"The R2 Digital Library offers special collections of Doody's Core Titles and Doody's Core Titles Essential Purchases as an acquisition option" said Meg White, Executive Director Technology Services at Rittenhouse. "This provides turnkey collection develop so that our Partners can ensure that the most trusted health science eBooks are available to their patrons."

Health sciences librarians rely on DCT as a key collection development tool. Rittenhouse is committed to providing Library and Hospital Partners a combination of DCT and online tools to provide valuable services for their collection development needs.
