Information we collect on our sites

We have designed our Sites so that visitors can navigate and view Site content without having to provide any personal contact details to us, such as their name, address, e-mail or telephone number.

This section describes information that visitors might choose to provide voluntarily, as well as our practices for the automatic collection and use of visitors' device-related information and analytics information, such as visitors' IP addresses and information about how visitors navigate through the Sites.

Information You Provide

Through your use of the Sites, you may choose to provide us with personal information that identifies you or your family members. This personal information may include a person’s name, postal or email address, phone number, Social Security or national identifying number, information about your health or medical condition, or any other information that would allow Edwards Lifesciences to identify or contact you. For example, a patient who has received one of Edwards Lifesciences’ products may choose to share his or her experiences with us. A person seeking employment may choose to apply for a job online or request additional information about job opportunities. A health care professional might ask that we send information about one or more of our products, or they might report information about a specific patient. A charitable organization might request a donation.

In addition, some aspects of our Sites may be restricted to use only by licensed health care professionals, and access to those portions of the Sites may require personal information to facilitate registration and verification.

In these instances, in order to fulfill your request to use the features of our Sites, we may ask for personal information such as your name, postal or email address, phone number, and perhaps a medical license number or other information to verify eligibility to view certain restricted content or to allow you to register for an event. In limited circumstances, such as an adverse event with one of our products, we may also be required to obtain personal information about your medical condition to enable required reporting to government regulatory agencies. Health care professionals should ensure that they have obtained their patient's consent (where required) before submitting personal or medical information about their patients.

Information We Collect Automatically

In order to improve the online experience, we routinely collect certain device-related and analytics information about our visitors and their use of our Sites. For example, we record the IP address of each computer that logs onto our Sites. This IP address does not enable us to identify you by name or contact details, but it does allow us to maintain communication with your device during your visit. It also allows us to identify the country you are visiting from, so that we may direct you automatically to the content that is appropriate for your country.

We also use "cookies" and similar tracking technologies. These are small data files that are placed on your computer which enable us and our third party partners to identify your navigation of the Sites and any specific pages or information that you visit. For more information about cookies, including your rights in respect of cookies, please visit our Cookie Statement.

We may also place advertisements on third parties' websites. These third parties may track website usage information, as well as information on "click throughs" from an advertisement to our Sites. This helps us understand the effectiveness of our advertising.

Information provided to us outside the Sites

We recognize that we might receive Personal Information in ways other than through our websites. We collect information about our customers and potential customers for the purposes of providing our products and services – such as contact information, financial/ billing information, and any other information that is provided to us during the course of doing business. For example, many physicians notify us when a specific valve has been implanted, so that we can maintain a database of the patient that received a valve with a specific serial number. Physicians also notify us of complaints or adverse events with our products, and may inadvertently include information about the patient's health. Job applicants may submit paper applications. We maintain records of purchases by our physician customers and their attendance at educational and other events we host.

We also collect information from our vendors, suppliers, consultants, professional advisors and other third parties for the purposes of managing and operating our business. For example, we will collect business contact information, financial information and other information necessary to engage our suppliers and other business partners and to evaluate their performance.

Personal Information is given the same protection by us, whether we receive it through a website or by other means. The descriptions below apply to Personal Information collected or received by us, no matter how the information was received.

How we use the information we collect

If you choose to provide personal information to us, we will use that information for a range of purposes:

- To respond to your specific inquiry or request, and to provide you with information and access to resources that you have requested from us.
- To provide, operate and maintain the Sites;
- To improve the navigation and content of our Sites, system administration and security;
- To process and complete transactions;
- To manage our customer relationships, including to respond to inquiries and comments and providing customer service and support;
- To provide our products and services;

- To carry out research and development to improve our products and services;
- To assess financial, credit or insurance risks arising from any relationship or prospective relationship with a customer, supplier, distributor or business partner;
- To carry out other legitimate business purposes, and other purposes about which we will notify our users and customers.

We will also give you an opportunity to tell us whether we may use your personal information to send you other information about Edwards Lifesciences' products, activities, or opportunities. If at any time you wish to "unsubscribe" from these communications, you may do so by completing this form. Edwards Lifesciences does not sell or otherwise provide personal information to third parties for the third parties' marketing purposes.

We may use the device-related and analytics information we and our partners collect (about your computer's IP address and through the use of cookies) during your future visits. This information allows us to direct you to specific content on the Sites that may be of interest and to remember your computer the next time you visit. If you visit multiple Edwards Lifesciences Sites, we may aggregate the information from your visits to better understand usage of our Sites.

We may also aggregate this device-related and analytics information we collect from all visitors, which helps us to improve our Sites by monitoring interest in the various Site content and understanding how our visitors navigate the Sites. This information may also help us diagnose any problems with our Sites.

If you choose to provide personal information to us, we may combine that information with the non-personal information collected through IP address recognition and cookies, to help us understand your specific interests and to deliver pertinent information to you.

Transfer of personal information to other countries: International processing in the U.S. and elsewhere

Any information that you provide or we collect, may be disclosed to Edwards Lifesciences affiliates and to our third party service providers around the world for purposes that are consistent with this Privacy Statement. This includes transfers to the United States, where much of our electronic data are stored. If you choose to provide your personal information to us via the Sites, this provision of information and your continued use of our Sites constitutes your acknowledgement of and consent to such transfers.

This means that your information may be communicated to a country other than your country of residence for use, processing, or storage, and it may also be communicated to third parties hired by us to provide services such as website hosting, database management, or analytics services. Some of these countries may not have data protection laws that are equivalent to the laws of the country where you reside and governments of some of these countries, such as the United States, may have access to your personal information, but we have taken measures to ensure your personal information remains protected to the standards described in this Privacy Statement, wherever it is processed.

In addition, where necessary and applicable, Edwards Lifesciences may transfer Personal Information relating to individuals in the European Economic Area, the United Kingdom, and Switzerland to other countries in reliance on the Standard Contractual Clauses.

Disclosure of information to third parties

Edwards Lifesciences uses third parties that perform services for us, including data processing services, and those third parties have agreed to maintain the privacy and security of any personal information they receive from us.

In some instances, we may be required by law, subpoena, or court order to disclose information. For example, if you use a Site to report an adverse product experience, we may be required to report that information to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) or to similar regulatory agencies in other countries. We may also disclose information where we believe necessary in order to protect the vital interests of any person, or exercise, establish or defend our legal rights. If a third party buys any of our group members or their assets, then we may disclose information to that third party in connection with the sale. We will make clear to the third party purchaser that it may only use personal information it receives from us for the purposes for which it was originally obtained.

Finally, we may request your consent to share your personal information with some third parties. In those circumstances, we will only share your personal information with your consent.

Your privacy choices

In your use of the Sites, you will be given opportunities to make choices about the personal information we receive and how we use it.

Receive information about Edwards. If you provide personal information to us, you may be asked to confirm whether you would like to receive future communications, including e-mail communications. If you confirm, we may from time to time send you information about products or services. Even if you confirm that Edwards may send you additional information, you may change your mind at any time by completing this form or by following the instructions in any email communications we send you.

Cookies. Please see our Cookie Statement for information about how to accept or refuse cookies and similar tracking technologies.

Facebook Custom Audiences / Conversion (“Facebook Pixel”). Our website uses the so-called "Facebook Pixel" of the social network "Facebook" for the following purposes:

1. Facebook (website) Custom Audiences

We use the Facebook pixel for remarketing purposes to be able to contact you again within 180 days. This allows us to display interest-based advertisements ("Facebook Ads") to users of the website when they visit the social network "Facebook" or other websites also using this tool. In this way, we pursue the interest in displaying advertisements that are of interest to you in order to make our website or offers more interesting for you.

2. Facebook conversion

We also use the Facebook Pixel to ensure that our Facebook Ads match the potential interest of users and are not annoying. With the help of the Facebook Pixel, we can track the effectiveness of Facebook ads for statistical and market research purposes by seeing whether users were redirected to our website after clicking on a Facebook ad (so-called "conversion"). Due to the marketing tools used, your browser automatically establishes a direct connection with the Facebook server as soon as you have agreed to the use of cookies requiring your consent. Through the integration of the Facebook pixel, Facebook receives the information that you have called up the corresponding website of our internet presence or clicked on an advertisement from us. If you are registered with a Facebook service, Facebook can assign the visit to your account. The processing of this data by Facebook takes place within the framework of Facebook's data policy. Special information and details about the Facebook pixel and its functionality can also be found in the Facebook help area.

We are jointly responsible with Facebook Ireland Ltd, 4 Grand Canal Square, Grand Canal Harbour, Dublin 2, Ireland (Facebook) for the collection and transfer of data in this process. This applies to the following purposes:

- The creation of individualized or suitable ads, as well as for their optimization
- Delivery of commercial and transaction-related messages (e.g. via Messenger)

The following processes are therefore not covered by joint controllership:

- The process that takes place after the collection and transmission is within the sole responsibility of Facebook
- The preparation of reports and analyses in aggregated and anonymized form is carried out as a Processor and is therefore within our responsibility.

We have concluded a corresponding agreement with Facebook for joint controllership, which can be accessed here: https://www.facebook.com/legal/controller_addendum. This agreement defines the respective responsibilities for fulfilling the obligation under the GDPR with regard to joint controllership.

The contact details of the Controller and the data protection officer of Facebook can be found here: <https://www.facebook.com/about/privacy>.

We have agreed with Facebook that Facebook can be used as a contact point for the exercise of data subject rights (see Section 1.3). Without prejudice to this, the jurisdiction of the Rights of Data Subjects is not limited. Further information on how Facebook processes personal data, including its legal basis and further information on the rights of data subjects can be found here: <https://www.facebook.com/about/privacy>. We transfer the data within the scope of joint controllership based on the legitimate interest pursuant to Art. 6 (1) f GDPR.

The “Facebook Custom Audiences” function can be deactivated in the cookie statement at privacy policy and for logged in users at <https://www.facebook.com/settings/?tab=ads#>.

Cookie lifetime: up to 180 days after last interaction (this applies only to cookies which have been set by this website)
Legal basis: Art. 6 (1) a GDPR (consent)

Accessing, Correcting or Changing Your Personal Information. If you wish to access, update or correct, amend or delete the personal information you have previously given us, please complete this form. We will consider your request in accordance with any applicable laws.

Do Not Track Signals/Online Tracking. Some Web browsers may be set to send a “Do Not Track” (DNT) signal to the websites you visit. This signal instructs the website to not collect information about your activities across different websites. We currently do not respond to DNT signals.

Removing Your Personal Information. You may request that Edwards Lifesciences delete your personal information by completing this form.

Children's privacy

This Site is directed toward adult users and not toward children. If Edwards Lifesciences learns that a child under the age of majority has provided us with personal information about themselves or that another user has provided such information without appropriate parental or guardian consent, we will delete such information from our active databases in accordance with applicable law, unless we are required by law to retain it. If you believe that your child has submitted personal information and you would like to request that their information be removed from our systems, please complete this form. We will make reasonable efforts to comply with your request.

We use industry-standard technological and organizational measures to protect the security of the information that we collect and that which you provide to us.

Despite these reasonable efforts to safeguard personal information from loss, theft, alteration, or other types of misuse, we cannot guarantee that such loss will never occur.
