Research & Development

Championing Excellence in Research and Development

We are committed to providing natural healthcare products of the highest quality and to building the evidence base for complementary medicines. With a longstanding commitment to research, we see investment in high quality research as an integral part of our success.

Integria works with leading natural medicine researchers and scientists in Australia and internationally to further the science of natural medicines and provide practitioners with effective products of outstanding quality. Our research portfolio is diverse and ranges from phytochemistry to clinical trials.

Phytochemistry is at the very heart of herbal medicine, and Integria and MediHerb are fortunate to have unrivalled in-house phytochemistry expertise.

In vitro research typically utilises cultured cells or enzymes to gain an understanding of how (or if) extracts or chemical compounds exert their therapeutic effects. This type of research provides for a deeper, more sophisticated understanding of how natural medicines work in the body.

Clinical trials look at the effects of our medicines in humans. Our Clinical Research Unit runs pilot trials and product evaluation studies, and we collaborate with leading clinical researchers on larger clinical trials.

At Integria, we are proud of having been actively involved in herbal and natural medicine research for more than three decades. Our commitment has resulted in more than 100 scientific publications in peer-reviewed journals.

Our commitment to research has been acknowledged nationally and internationally, and we have received prestigious awards from Complementary Medicines Australia and the American Botanical Council. In 2019, The Australian Financial Review/BOSS named Integria among the ten most innovative manufacturing and consumer companies in Australia for our research and development on the MediHerb Mushroom Forte products.

For over three decades, Integria and MediHerb have been industry leaders in collaborative research on herbal medicines.

Current and Recent Research Projects

Synergistic Immune Modulating Activity of a Medicinal Mushroom Blend

Partner: Institute for Glycomics, Griffith University

Research led to the development of the MediHerb Mushroom Forte products. Patent pending synergistic activity was demonstrated, and the results were published in an international peer-reviewed journal.

Australian Indigenous Herbal Medicine Project

Partners: Menzies School of Health Research, The University of Queensland, Traditional Homeland Enterprises, partially funded by the Cooperative Research Centre for Developing Northern Australia.

Combining traditional knowledge and modern science, this ongoing project aims to enable on-country business based on traditional medicines. Best-practice benefit sharing principles, honouring traditional knowledge and the creation of employment and economic opportunities for our First Nations people in remote communities in Northern Australia are key project outcomes.

Synergistic Activity of Phytochemicals

Partner: NICM Health Research Institute, Western Sydney University

Synergy is a concept dear to natural healthcare practitioners, but little is known about how synergy comes about at the molecular level. This 3-year project, funded by the Australian Research Council, seeks to expand the knowledge of the molecular mechanisms underlying synergistic activity of natural products.

Clinical Research for Functional GIT Health

Partner: Evidence Sciences

MediHerb Prebiotica Regenex Powder is a blend of six fibres and polyphenol ingredients (partially hydrolysed guar gum, acacia gum, slippery elm, fruit pectin, raw cacao powder and red dragon fruit)

This three week trial in 61 people with functional constipation demonstrated significant positive changes in clinical outcomes using the powder in comparison to control. Benefits included increased bowel frequency, improved stool consistency, and decreased bloating and other symptoms associated with constipation. The differences between the active and control groups were both clinically and statistically significant.

Papillion is useful for securely filling in voids and wrapping fragile products within the box, it has the potential to fill large volume at a low weight and is especially soft and flexible.

For Shock Absorption

Chevron is also used to deliver maximum fill with less material and has a unique paper cushion system. Its appearance is that of crinkled paper tube and offers exceptional shock absorption during transport.

For Eco-Friendly

Honeycomb is particularly eco-friendly, made from kraft paper which ensures it is fully recyclable; biodegradable and compostable. This replaces any need for plastic bubble wrap.

AT NO COST TO YOU!

Access all those great brands from Integria Healthcare through PharmX connectivity

How to save time processing your Integria Healthcare orders and invoices by using PharmX?

Option 1:

Use your CSO wholesaler account on PharmX to place your orders.*

note: product availability and ranging varies by CSO wholesaler and by State.*

Option 2:

Set up Integria as one of your suppliers on PharmX to transmit orders and process invoices directly.

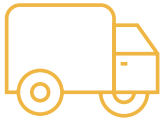

If you have a Direct Account with Integria: but your direct account is not linked on PharmX as a supplier account.

Simply email the service team of your POS partners asking to have your Integria account acknowledged on PharmX. Once completed, an alert will be sent to Integria from PharmX to configure your account within our system. Once that's done, you can enjoy the benefits of a full ordering and invoicing integration through PharmX.

If you do not have a Direct Account and would like to procure directly from Integria Healthcare:

Please visit this link to complete the account application form www.myintegria.com. Integria Healthcare will then request an account enablement on PharmX so that orders and invoices are transmitted seamless through the PharmX Gateway.
