A multicultural metropolis on the island of Mindanao, Davao is one of the largest and most cosmopolitan cities in the Philippines. With the country's highest mountain, Mount Apo, as its backdrop, this vibrant city offers a mix of fabulous landscapes that include parks like the Eden Nature Park and the Mount Apo National Park. Besides, superb beaches, diving waters, and islands such as the unspoiled Samal Island.

THE CITY

Maynard Magallen/unsplash

Indigenous tribes like the Bagabo, B'laan, Mandaya, Masaka, Manobo and T'boli mingle with migrant settlers, bohemian, Muslim and expatriate communities, as well as a steady flow of tourists. Add to this a vibrant business and investment sector, a large seaport that handles cargo in and out of the country and you have a mix that makes Davao one of the most engaging and busiest cities imaginable. To the people of the Philippines Davao is, above all, one of the most charismatic and culturally diverse cities. Its population comes from all corners of the globe.

Davao, or Metropolitan 'Metro' Davao as it is often referred to, hugs the southernmost coastline of Mindanao island to the south of the Philippines. Although, technically, independent of any province it is generally linked with Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur, Davao Oriental and the Compostela Valley. All these areas, with Metro Davao being its capital, have their own distinct characters. Davao del Norte is known for its acres of banana plantations and citrus groves along with the beautiful Samal Island just off its coastline. Davao del Sur is where visitors will find the Mount Apo National Park dotted with orchids. The white beaches and waterfalls make Davao Oriental a natural haunt of visiting holidaymakers while the Compostela Valley affords the cream of earth's natural wonders.

DO & SEE

Jomark Francis Velasco/unsplash

Davao is famous for many things: golden eagles, exotic flowers and breathtaking attractions and landscapes. Look out for the Puentespina Orchids and Tropical Plants centre where the colours and scents will leave you bewildered, or the shops selling beautiful works in gold — the city is a major producer of gold and crafts.

For adventure seekers, there's the Davao River where white water rafting is quite popular and the Crocodile Park. No visit to Davao would be complete without enjoying one of its colourful festivals. The Araw ng Dabaw Festival in March, the Padigosan and the Sambuokan in September or the Banayan Festival in October. They all are an excellent way to see local tradition at its best.

Crocodile Park

The native home to the Philippines's largest known crocodile at nearly 20 metres in length, the Crocodile Park is an important breeding centre as well as a popular tourist attraction.

There are picnic areas and activities like horse-riding offered too.

DINING

Tony Magdaraog/Shutterstock.com

Dining out in Davao is an international affair. There are restaurants that serve traditional Cantonese style dishes of beautifully prepared seafood, fruit and vegetarian dishes and Mediterranean themed eateries specialising in kebabs, pizzas, mezes, hamburgers, and grills.

There are French, Italian, Indian, Chinese, Japanese and Korean restaurants as well. Davao is a culturally diverse city and this is reflected in its vast range of places to eat. It's famous for its grilled tuna, known as inihaw, and its version of tuna sashimi called kinilaw.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Costa Studio/Shutterstock.com

Nightlife in Davao might not seem quite as vibrant as you would expect from a cosmopolitan city. This may be due to the alcohol curfew currently imposed here. The curfew forbids the sale and consumption of alcohol in public places between midnight and 8 am. This regulation has forced many business owners to convert bars into restaurants and massage parlours, a transformation most noticeable in Torres Street, the former Davao nightlife hot-spot.

Despite the curfew, there are some popular evening venues still in operation, including jazz clubs and piano bars, excellent restaurants with live music, and even nightclubs, leaving visitors with quite a few options to choose from.

Matina Town Square

Matina Town Square is the well-established nightlife centre of Davao. The MTS (as it is often referred to) teems with bars, pubs, cafes, and restaurants of all sorts imaginable, and hosts nightly live music shows as well as indigenous music performances.

TOURIST INFORMATION

Lester Casio/unsplash

Francisco Bangoy International Airport (DVO)

Davao International Airport, also known as Davao International Airport, is the busiest airport on the island of Mindanao, serving Davao city. Most flights arrive from other airports in the Philippines, but a growing number of international flights arrive from Asian cities like

Hong Kong, Macau, Singapore, Seoul and also from Indonesia. The airport has a range of facilities, including ATM machines and telephones.

The best way to make the roughly 20-minute journey into the centre of the city is by taxi. Metered and fixed rate taxis can be found outside the airport terminal. Small buses called 'Jeepneys' are a cheaper option.

Passport / Visa

The Philippines can be visited visa-free for up to 30 days by citizens of all European Union member states, all ASEAN member states, the UK, the USA, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, South Africa, Malaysia, Israel, the UAE and most countries in Latin America. A valid return or onward ticket and a passport that is valid upon entry and for at least six months beyond the period of stay are required to enter the Philippines. If you are unsure whether or not you need to apply for a visa, contact the embassy or consulate in your country.

Best Time to Visit

The dry period between November and April is the peak tourist season in the Philippines. Hidden areas and remote islands are fully accessible, and temperatures are very mild, especially from December to February.

During the wet season, from May to October, you can still enjoy sunny days, but bear in mind that typhoons can occur.

The months of May and November are considered low season, which means smaller crowds and lower prices for flights and accommodation. The weather is still pleasant, nonetheless.

Public Transport

Getting around Davao is relatively straightforward, although you can expect some interruptions due to bad weather like torrential rain. The more adventurous forms of transport are the Jeepney, which are local buses, tricycles or pedicabs. If you choose any of these transport means, make sure you have some loose change to pay your driver.
