THE CITY

Sean Pavone/Shutterstock.com

Copenhagen is an ancient city, full of beautiful historic buildings and many points of interest. The ramparts and walls surrounding the city centre were demolished around the middle of the nineteenth century. This allowed Copenhagen to assume the peculiar architectural structure characterised by narrow stone streets that lead directly to the city centre and which are the background to numerous shops and bars.

In recent years, Copenhagen's historic architectural heritage has been enriched with modern and contemporary buildings. An example of these are those designed by the Danish and French architects Bjarke Ingels and Jean Nouvel, who gave a new touch to the old-fashioned style of the city.

Copenhagen is also known for its relaxing atmosphere. Denmark's capital effortlessly captures the essence of 'hygge', a Danish term that encapsulates a sense of cosiness, comfort, and contentment. The city's charming streets, picturesque canals, and stylish yet welcoming spaces contribute to the overall hygge atmosphere. Locals and visitors alike savour moments of relaxation in cosy cafés, enjoy leisurely walks through parks, and appreciate the warm, convivial ambience of Copenhagen's many restaurants and bars.

Inner City (Indre By)

The Inner City can be defined as the metropolis of Copenhagen, which encompasses the city's oldest district with pretty narrow streets and original houses. The city centre is full of shops, bars, restaurants, parks, numerous canals and, of course, Nyhavn, the colourful harbour of Copenhagen. The main street of Inner City is Strøget, which goes from the town hall square to Kongens Nytorv. Strøget is always frequented by a myriad of street performers, but do not forget to take a trip to the pretty side streets like Frederiksberggade, Nygade and Vimmelskaftet.

Broad boulevards, countless cafés, trendy restaurants, and innovative design shops. The neighbourhood of Østerbro, which is also called Copenhagen Ø, is somewhat posh and extravagant, but at the same time completely down to earth. Østerbro is located north of Copenhagen city centre, near the old city gate Østerport. Shop design items at WAUW, have a craft beer at Søernes Ølbar, or relax and rest in Fælledparken - Denmark's largest public park.

Frederiksberg

Frederiksberg is a fashionable part of Copenhagen with excellent shopping opportunities, green areas, as well as plenty of restaurants, cafés and delicacy shops. It's considered to be posher than Nørrebro and Vesterbro and people living here are usually slightly older and more established. The main street through Frederiksberg is Gammel Kongevej - 'Old Kings Road'. Værnedamsvej, which is seen as cosy, yet cool, is a small and bustling shopping street, linking Vesterbrogade and the beginning of Frederiksberg Allé with Gammel Kongevej. Frederiksberg is also a green oasis with Frederiksberg Gardens, the romantic garden of the Faculty of Life Sciences and Søndermarken.

Once Vesterbro was mostly known for its infamous red light district. Today, it's one of the most trendy places in all of Copenhagen. The district is situated within walking distance from the city centre, right behind the Central Station. It's one of the most fashionable places in the city - not just to live, but to shop, eat, drink and have an amazing and memorable night out.

Vibrant, colourful, casual and young at heart, Nørrebro is a magic area of Copenhagen. Here you'll find trendy bars and fashionable designer shops next door to dodgy dive bars and cheap kebab places. If you're into small design shops head for Elmegade or Jægersborggade, and if you like antiques Ravensborggade is the place for you to head to. At Sankt Hans Torv and the streets around it, you have plenty of choices for dinner and drinks. At Assistens Cemetery, you can visit the graves of famous Danes, such as the famous fairy tale writer Hans Christian Andersen or philosopher Søren Kierkegaard.

SUSTAINABLE CITY

News Oresund/cc by 2.0/Flickr (cropped) (image cropped)

Copenhagen is often mentioned as one of the most environmentally conscious cities in Europe, if not the entire world. The Danish capital hopes to achieve carbon neutrality by 2025 and has already taken a number of steps toward this ambitious goal.

A notable stride in this direction involves the rapid transition of buses from diesel to electric power, delivering not only a positive impact on air quality but also a reduction in noise pollution. In addition, the city is prioritising the development of dedicated biking lanes to encourage sustainable transportation — subsidised prices for electric bikes are making the switch from cars even more attractive.

Copenhagen maintains a commitment to sustainability, with approximately two-thirds of its hotels being eco-certified. These certifications ensure the adoption of best practices in sustainable energy, food, and design. Additionally, the city's dining scene aligns with eco-friendly principles, with many restaurants offering organic food options to conscientious consumers.

Green Bike Tours

Green Bike Tours is a non-profit company that offers bike and walking tours in English with a focus on green and sustainable cities. Their routes take you through different parts of Copenhagen via bike-friendly streets and bridges. You'll bike at a comfortable pace through the city centre and into the neighbourhoods of Vesterbro, Østerbro, Nørrebro and Islands Brygge.

On the 3-hour tour, you'll come across amazing hidden gems, urban gardens, wonderful green areas, cosy squares and recreative areas, plus solar installations, green roofs, harbour pools, green architecture, energy-efficient buildings and wind turbines.

Urban Gardens & Wild Nature

Copenhagen boasts numerous parks and gardens that are perfect places to relax, sunbathe, have a picnic with friends or just read a book.

Copenhagen Municipality is driven by a nature-based urban development model, providing green spaces for humans as well as non-human animals. Instead of sterile green lawns, you'll see a jumble of wildflowers and herbs like Yarrow, Pulmonaria and Asters that are swarmed by eager insects.

The King's Garden is a popular spot for Copenhageners while Frederiksberg Gardens boasts lush open areas and canals. Explore the district of St. Kjeld's neighbourhood on Østerbro where wild plants and freshly harvested vegetables are a common sight. Additionally, some of Copenhagen's cemeteries are commonly used as green breathing spaces for leisurely walks.

CopenHill

CopenHill is spectacular and innovative — an artificial ski slope and hiking area built on top of the cutting-edge waste-to-energy plant.

This remarkable facility not only provides an exciting recreational space but also supplies energy to tens of thousands of homes and businesses.

A guided tour will take you to the very top by lift, where you'll learn about the entire building: the architecture, the vision, sustainability practices and the ski slope. At the summit of this massive shimmering metal structure, you'll also be rewarded with an excellent view of Copenhagen's downtown.

Feel free to bring your own skiing and snowboarding equipment, or rent some from the local shop. The slope is open year-round since it does not rely on snow. If skiing is not your thing, how about climbing? The climbing wall at CopenHill is the world's tallest at 85 metres.

Baths & Beaches

In Copenhagen, you are never far from a beach. In the summer, you can go for a swim in the many centrally located harbour baths. Amager Strandpark offers 4.6 kilometres of white sand beach, Islands Brygge Harbour Bath has five basins and Urban Beach offers sand, shells and drinks. Amager Strandpark is also ideal for children. On one side, you have children's pools and on the other side sand and dunes. Fun times for every age are guaranteed.

DO & SEE

Oleksiy Mark/Shutterstock.com

Copenhagen is an old city with historic buildings, royal castles, beautiful parks and harbours, and plenty of attractions and activities to keep even the most eager tourist busy. The city centre is characterised by charming architecture and narrow curving streets. But within recent years Copenhagen has supplemented its architectural heritage with new, world-class architecture.

It is easy to explore the city and get around, and many sights are within walking distance from one another. You can always catch a bus or take the metro to get around, or rent a bike and travel the Danish way.

Nyhavn

This iconic postcard-ready sight is somewhat of a sudden splash of colour and a definite must-visit when in town. The canal was built to connect Kongens Nytorv to the harbour and was long a haunt for sailors and writers, including Hans Christian Andersen. He wrote 'The Tinderbox', 'Little Claus and Big Claus' and 'The Princess and the Pea' while living at No 20, and also spent time living at Nos 18 and 67. Stroll along the harbour and sit down for an evening drink in one of the many enticing establishments, most of which offer heating and blankets to make for a cosy time even at low temperatures.

Freetown Christiania

Escape the capitalist crunch and head to Freetown Christiania, a hash-scented commune straddling the eastern side of Christianshavn.

Since its establishment by squatters in 1971, the area has drawn nonconformists from across the globe, attracted by the concept of collective business, workshops, and communal living. Explore beyond the settlement's infamous 'Pusher Street' - lined with shady hash and marijuana dealers who do not appreciate photographs - and you'll stumble upon a semi-bucolic wonderland of whimsical DIY homes, cosy garden plots, eateries, beer gardens, and music venues.

Rosenborg Castle

A 'once upon a time' combo of turrets, gables and moat, the early-17th-century Rosenborg Slot was built in Dutch Renaissance style between 1606 and 1633 by King Christian IV to serve as his summer home. Today, the castle's 24 upper rooms are chronologically arranged, housing the furnishings and portraits of each monarch from Christian IV to Frederik VII. The pièce de résistance is the basement Treasury, home to the dazzling crown jewels, among them Christian IV's glorious crown and Christian III's jewel-studded sword.

The Little Mermaid

New York has its Lady Liberty and Sydney its Danish-designed Opera House. When the world thinks of Copenhagen, the chances are they're thinking of the Little Mermaid. Love her or loathe her (watch Copenhageners cringe at the very mention of her), this small, underwhelming statue is arguably the most photographed sight in the country, as well as the cause of countless 'Is that it?' shrugs from tourists who have trudged the kilometre or so along an often windswept harbourfront to see her.

Whether locals like it or not, The Little Mermaid has become Copenhagen's most recognisable symbol, and visiting to snap a quick shot is, certainly, worth the detour from the city's core. This commemoration of Andersen's genius is conveniently located right next to the historic fortress of Kastellet, so make sure to walk through the green star-shaped area on your way back.

Tivoli Gardens

Dating from 1843, the stunning Tivoli wins fans with its dreamy whirl of amusement rides, twinkling pavilions, carnival games, and open-air stage shows. Visitors can ride the renovated, century-old roller coaster, enjoy the famous Saturday evening fireworks display or just soak up the story-book atmosphere. A good tip is to go on Friday during summer when the open-air Plænen stage hosts free rock concerts by Danish bands (and the occasional international superstar).

Church of Holmen

Queen Margrethe II took her marriage vows here in 1967, and while much of the present Dutch Renaissance-style structure dates from 1641, the church's nave was originally built in 1562 to be used as an anchor forge. Converted into a church for the Royal Navy in 1619, the building's burial chapel contains the remains of Admiral Niels Juel, who beat back the Swedes in the crucial 1677 Battle of Køge Bay. DINING

Copenhagen is the leading gastronomy capital of Scandinavia. The city has more Michelin restaurants than any neighbouring country. Copenhagen is also home to Noma, which was awarded as the World's Best Restaurant three years in a row.

Whether you are into bistros or Michelin-starred restaurants, there is plenty for you in Copenhagen. The restaurant scene is among the world's most distinct and innovative, and it caters to all budgets. When dining out, try the much-appraised Nordic kitchen at least once. It is known for being of high quality and with a focus on using local and seasonal products.

Reffen — Copenhagen Street Food

Reffen is the largest street food venue in the Nordics. With over 30 stalls offering global flavours, it merges culinary innovation with sustainability. This urban playground nurtures start-ups and provides a lively atmosphere, complete with waterfront views and cosy indoor spaces at Werkstatt. Be sure to try the Gambian stew at Baobab and pair it with a zesty beer from Nørrebro Bryghus.

CAFÉS

William Perugini/Shutterstock.com

Curious about Danish cakes and pastries? When in Denmark, you have to try a real Danish — or wienerbrød, as it is called here. They are sold in many varieties at bakeries and cafés all over the city.

The oldest patisserie in Copenhagen is 'Conditori La Glace', which was founded in 1870. Amongst many mouth-watering cakes and pastries, you will find the classic Sports Cake, which consists of crushed nougat, whipped cream, a macaroon bottom and caramelized choux pastry.

There is nothing better than to grab an ice cream cone to go on a nice summer day. Denmark is famous for its dairy products, and you will understand why when you try local ice cream. By the way, did you know that Danes are one of the most ice cream-eating people in the world? The average Dane eats 10 litres of ice cream a year.

Café Dyrehaven

Café Dyrehaven, nestled in the trendy Vesterbro neighbourhood, is a cherished sidewalk café offering unpretentious fare from breakfast to dinner. The cosy old pub atmosphere, adorned with a wooden bar and quirky decor like deer antlers, provides the perfect backdrop for enjoying not only the delightful food but also a selection of beer and wine.

SHOPPING

Maridav/Shutterstock.com

Copenhagen is great for shopping, both because of the variety of the shops and because the city is compact. Start your shopping trip in the Inner City (Indre By). On Strøget, you'll find most of the big chain stores and more exclusive shops.

Stroll down the small streets parallel to Strøget and Købmagergade where you'll find vintage shops, Danish designers such as Wood Wood, Malene Birger and Henrik Vibskov, and small jewellery and ceramics shops.

Streets outside the Inner City that are worth checking out are Istedgade, Gl. Kongevej, Elmegade, Jægersborggade and Østerbrogade.

Vesterbro

The neighbourhood of Vesterbro isn't only home to Copenhagen's red-light district and some of the best eateries in town, but also quite a few vintage shops and clothing boutiques that will surely make a fashionista's heart beat faster. Do not miss Istedgade Street, the hippest of them all.

Latin Quarter

Copenhagen's very own Latin Quarter is made up of 4 main streets (Studiestræde, Sankt Pedersstræde, Larsbjørnsstræde and Teglgårdsstræde), and is known for the variety of creative avant-garde boutiques, as well as second-hand shops and food take-outs. The proximity to the University means the area is always flooded with hip, in-style young students.

TOURIST INFORMATION

alexdrim/Shutterstock.com

Best Time to Visit

The best time to visit Copenhagen is from March to August, offering pleasant weather and vibrant events. Spring, from March to May, provides milder temperatures and fewer crowds, while summer brings lively festivals and music, making the city more bustling. June through August offers comfortable temperatures. Copenhageners take advantage of this time to enjoy outdoor activities like swimming in the surrounding ocean and harbours.

Alternatively, the winter months, from December to February, represent the most affordable period with lower prices on accommodations and airfare. Despite chilly temperatures, this time is ideal for indoor activities like exploring museums and cafés. Additionally, winter in Copenhagen showcases magical Christmas festivities, contributing to the city's cosy and enchanting atmosphere.

Copenhagen Airport, Kastrup (CPH)

Copenhagen Airport, Kastrup, is located just eight kilometres from the centre of the city. As the largest and busiest airport in Scandinavia, it comprises three terminals, with international arrivals primarily processed in Terminal 3.

Various transportation options connect the airport to the city centre, ensuring a quick journey of about 15 to 35 minutes. Trains departing every ten minutes from Copenhagen Central Station offer a 15-minute commute, with convenient connections to the city and beyond via metro, train, S-train, or bus. The Metro operates around the clock, providing efficient travel to key locations, while buses offer a more economical but lengthier 35-minute ride to the central station. Taxis are available outside Terminal 3 but represent the priciest option.

Travellers holding a Copenhagen Card enjoy free, unlimited public transport within the entire capital region, covering trips to/from Copenhagen Airport. The card also grants free entry to over 80 attractions and museums, along with discounts at various establishments.

Public Transport

Copenhagen boasts a reliable public transport system, with Metro, S-trains, and buses, including waterbuses, accessible using the same ticket. All you need to know is how many zones you will pass on your journey, which will play a crucial role in determining the appropriate ticket.

All three metro lines operate 24/7 for seamless travel. The A-buses are the primary buses in central Copenhagen; they run consistently at all hours, while night buses (N buses) operate from 1am to 5am, identifiable by their grey bus stop signs. The bright red "S" trains connect suburbs and surrounding towns to the city, running from 5am to 12:30am.

Biking provides an excellent and popular means of navigating the city, allowing visitors and locals to easily explore its charming streets and attractions while enjoying the bicycle-friendly infrastructure.

Passport/Visa

Denmark can be visited visa-free for up to 90 days by citizens of Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Malaysia, Israel, UAE and most countries in America. If you are unsure whether or not you need to apply for a visa, we recommend contacting the embassy or consulate in your country. International (non-Schengen) travellers need a passport that is valid for at least 3 months after the end of their intended trip in order to enter the Schengen zone. Citizens of Schengen countries can travel without a passport but must have a valid ID with them during their stay.

Bike City Copenhagen

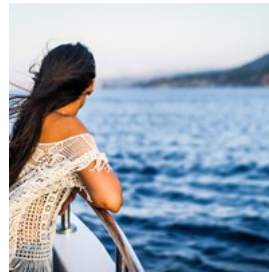

While in Copenhagen, why not get around the Danish way? In Copenhagen, practically everybody rides a bike - it's an easy way to get around and it's good for the environment. Rent a bike from your hotel or at one of the many bike rental shops in the city. One of the most popular bike rental shops is Donkey Republic. You can rent a bike and pick it up from various locations around the city and you can easily unlock it with your phone.

Electricity

In Denmark, the electrical system operates on 220V at 50Hz. The country uses electrical plugs of type E and type K. The Type K electrical plug looks like Type E but with a ground pin

instead of a hole on the plug, and a hole instead of a pin on the socket. So, it has two round pins and one spade grounding pin.
