THE TOWNS OF THE HUNTER VALLEY

Hamilton Lund/Destination NSW for the Hunter Valley

The Hunter Valley is a world-class wine region and tourist destination with a number of charming towns and villages. They all offer plenty to be discovered on their own or while enjoying the delights of a food and wine trail.

Broke

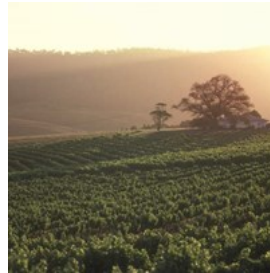

Broke was settled as early as 1824, and became an important staging point on the overland cattle route between the Hunter and Sydney. Dairying, orange orchards and market gardens also featured in the early development of the town. Today, the village is a major wine area that produces soft and distinctive wines including semillon, shiraz, chardonnay and verdelho as well as Italian varieties such as sangiovese, barbera and dolcetto.

Cessnock

Cessnock developed as a private village on the road that is now known as The Convict Trail, the original Sydney - Hunter Valley road hand-built by 3,000 convicts. Originally a service centre for travellers, Cessnock became a major mining centre at the turn of the century, however wine and tourism have since become the major local industries.

Dungog

Rolling hills, national parks and state forests surround gorgeous Dungog. Its main street is an urban conservation area. Notable historic buildings include the primary school built in 1843 and designed by colonial architect Edmund Blacket, who also designed the University of Sydney and St Andrew's Cathedral in Sydney. The Dungog Cinema has a Spanish mission-style façade and is the oldest operating purpose-built cinema in Australia.

Lovedale

As a major wine-producing area, Lovedale dates back to the early 1800s when local wheat and general produce farmers turned to grape growing. The name Lovedale combines the name of one of the early families of the district, the Loves, with the memory of the Yorkshire Dales in England. Visit the historic St Paul's Rothbury cemetery in Wilderness Road and see where the famous winemaking families have been laid to rest.

Morpeth

Founded in the 1820s, the town developed as a river port in the following decade and became an important inland trading post. Morpeth's days as a river port ended around 1890, but the town's comparative isolation meant that its historic shopfronts, wharves and even the hitching posts along the main street have survived intact, hence its National Trust classification today. This is a living museum of Australia's past, complemented by modern dining options, boutique gift shops and specialty craft stores.

Pokolbin

Pokolbin's fortunes have been dictated by the vineyards that surround it. Wine grapes were first planted in the area in the 1870s, but development was relatively slow and uneven until the 1970s, when Australia achieved the recognition it deserved as a major wine producer and the Lower Hunter was at the vanguard of this movement. Winding country roads lead from the town to some of the region's best known wineries including Lindeman's, Tyrrell's, Tulloch, Lake's Folly, Brokenwood and Bimbadgen.

Best Time to Visit

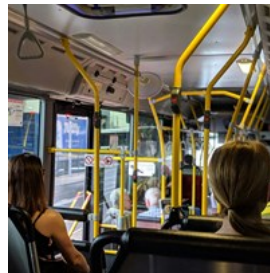

Since the Hunter Valley is a wine region with vineyards and green landscapes, spring, from September to November, is by far the best time to visit given its vibrant colours and mild weather. Temperatures begin to rise in October, making it perfect for those looking for outdoor activities.

If you want to enjoy lower prices, visit during the summer months from June to August. However, be aware that some wineries and vineyards might be closed during this quieter period.
