TOURIST INFORMATION

Arkady Mazor/Shutterstock.com

Best Time To Visit

The best time to visit Eilat is between November and March, when the weather is pleasantly warm, ranging from 20 to 25 degrees

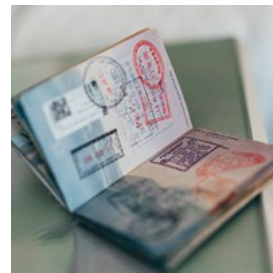

Celsius, making it ideal for outdoor activities and beach time. This period is less crowded than the peak summer months, offering a more relaxed experience and better accommodation rates.

During these cooler months, you can enjoy Eilat's unique attractions, such as snorkelling in the Coral Beach Nature Reserve and exploring the stunning underwater observatory.

In addition, Eilat's winter season hosts exciting events like the Eilat Chamber Music Festival and the annual Eilat Jazz Festival. The mild winter weather also makes it a perfect time to take day trips to the nearby desert landscapes or visit the striking Red Canyon without the oppressive heat of summer.

Passport/Visa

To visit Israel, your passport should be valid for at least the duration of your stay. While Israel recommends six months of validity, it's no longer a strict requirement as long as your passport remains valid during your visit.

Most visitors from countries with visa exemption agreements, including the EU, USA, Canada, and Australia, can enter Israel for up to 90 days without a visa. However, as of August 2024, an Electronic Travel Authorization (ETA-IL) must be obtained online at least 72 hours before travel. For those from non-exempt countries, a visa is required in advance.

In addition, Israel issues an entry card instead of stamping passports, which helps avoid complications when travelling to certain Arab or Muslim countries. Carry your passport if you plan to visit Palestinian territories, as it may be required at checkpoints.

Ilan and Asaf Ramon International Airport (ETM)

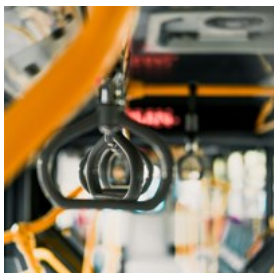

The closest airport for travellers flying to Eilat is Ramon Airport, located about 18 kilometres north of the city. If you are flying internationally, you might also consider arriving at Ben Gurion Airport near Tel Aviv, which is about 300 kilometres from Eilat, and then taking a domestic flight or a bus to Eilat.

Public Transport

Eilat's town centre is compact and easy to get around on foot. Local buses, including Route 1 which serves the hotel area and Route 15 along Taba Road, generally run every 30 minutes from 7am to 7pm—service is reduced on Fridays, with a break around 3pm, and there is no service on Saturdays.

In Eilat, finding taxis is generally easy, especially around popular tourist areas and hotels. Taxis are metered, but it's advisable to ensure the meter is running or agree on a fare before starting your journey. Another alternative is the local ride-hailing app Gett, which is widely used in Eilat.

It's worth noting that taxi fares can be higher at night and on Shabbat, so planning your transportation in advance can help avoid surprises.

In Eilat, post offices typically operate from Sunday to Thursday, with usual opening hours from 8am to 1pm and 4pm to 6pm. On Fridays, they generally open from 8am to 1pm and are closed on Saturdays.
