About Razom Script

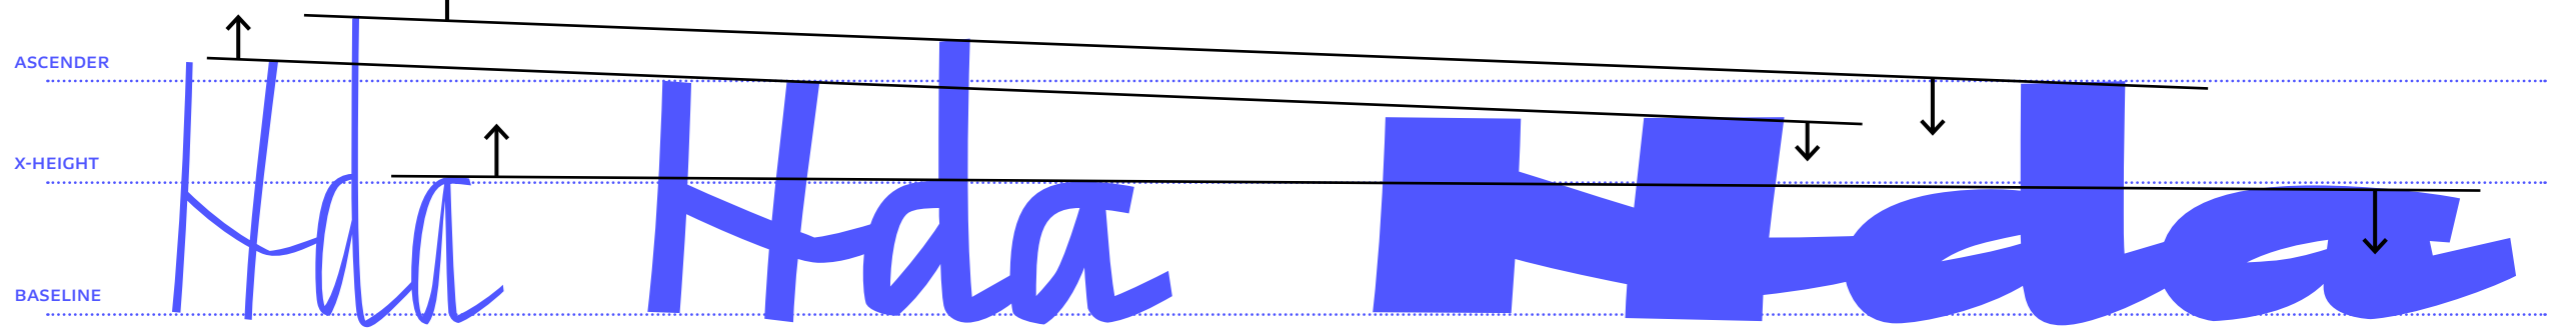

Razom Script is a typeface with deep roots in pointed brush calligraphy that takes advantage of current font technology to go beyond handwriting and reach new limits. A successful blend between printed and handwritten letterforms is visible when comparing upper and lowercase.

The weight of the typeface evolve in a way that pushes the limits of a script typeface to suggest new uses. Normally, families are developed in weights, not proportions. Also, having several weights in a script family is rather rare. But in Razom Script, as the fonts gain weight, big differences show up in the font outlines: the thin weight looks soft and delicate but as we examine darker variables, they also seem to get broken.

The counters of the letters rotate from vertical to horizontal during this process.

▶ NORMALLY, WHEN YOU WANT YOUR WEIGHTS LOOKS OPTICALLY THE SAME SIZE, YOU WILL MAKE THE BOLDER STYLES LARGER.
IN RAZOM SCRIPT, SINCE THE FAMILY MEMBERS GROWS NOT ONLY IN WEIGHT BUT ALSO IN WIDTH, THE THINNER FAMILY MEMBERS
NEEDED TO BE LARGER AND BOLDER WEIGHTS SMALLER TO LOOK OPTICALLY EQUAL WHEN TYPESET TOGETHER.
