

Your dog loves going out for walks, but equally loves the comfort of their own home. They like to snuggle in their bed and enjoy their favourite toy at home.

They rarely eat or pick up things they discover when out for walks, and always stick to the food you give them.

However, as they love their pampering, they may occasionally visit a groomer for a spruce up or head to the doggy daycare to play with their pals.

Your dog may be at risk and require regular protection from intestinal parasites and fleas.

POSSIBLE RISKS

Intestinal Parasites

Fleas

Depending on your geographic area, your dog could be at risk for heartworms, requiring appropriate seasonal protection, and may also be at risk and require tick protection.

ADDITIONAL RISKS

Ticks

Heartworms

Talk to your veterinarian if you feed raw food.

DID YOU KNOW?

If your dog lives with other pets it is important to consider parasite prevention for all members of your furry household, especially for fleas.

Share this dog profile with your veterinarian

and ask for the most suitable parasite control products to ensure your pet and household are protected!

Zoonotic Risks: Some parasites can move from dogs to humans. There is a higher risk of concern in children, elderly, pregnant or immunosuppressed individuals.
